In regard to your office's request for suggestions on how to prioritize resources and organize enforcement to protect intellectual property, I beseech you to spare no resources in punishing violators of every copyright law anywhere in the world. Pursue them in their homes, pursue them at their jobs, pursue them at their schools, pursue them at their free wi-fi hangouts. The entire United States government and all governments around the world must make the punishment of these freeloaders and the protection of our movie and recording industries their highest priority. What could be a higher endeavor? Raise taxes, make new laws, and redirect all police forces around the world in this great endeavor.

thank you
